Camp Format

Come join us in the cool pines at Tonto Creek Camp in Northern Arizona for our 43rd Annual Summer Vault Camp. Enjoy the mild summer days in the high altitude of Northern Arizona while you learn what it takes to become a better vaulter. Each summer the best pole vaulters in the Southwest join each other to learn, compete, and push each other to new boundaries. Campers will experience this sense of camaraderie while achieving higher heights at this camp. Skill testing, new drills and training techniques in addition to plenty of jumping opportunities on multiple pits are just some of the camp's many highlights. Participants will also benefit from a low coach to athlete ratio, receiving individual instruction from the best coaching staff in the United States. Camp staff will share the progressions and techniques that took Stacy Dragila, Nick Hysong, Tori Pena, and Melissa Mueller to the Olympic Games. Days will consist of two vault sessions with recreation/rest time built into the schedule. Evenings will be filled with lectures, activities and free time. Learn what it will take for you to improve your vaulting. Whether fine tuning your skills or learning how to pole vault for the very first time, this camp will fit your needs. Don't miss out on this great opportunity.

Philosophy Statement

We are at a time in the history of the Pole Vault where the event is facing both great opportunity and great scrutiny. With the inclusion of women to the event, pole vaulting is enjoying a new wave of popularity and exposure. At the same time, rising costs of equipment and growing concerns for liability have made administrators and schools nervous.

Our camps are part of an effort to help promote vaulting in a way that allows for safety and success to go hand in hand. By following our learning progressions, all vaulters can improve at their own comfort level. Emphasis is on learning the basics of the event before tackling the more advanced concepts.

As in all athletic events, there is no one correct way to achieve success. Our methodology has been used for years by the Kiss the Sky staff as well as other successful vault coaches. These methods are proven to properly and safely develop the young vaulter.

Keep in mind that there are always different approaches to the same idea. Our methods, with specific consideration to individuality, can serve as a guide to both athletes and coaches.

It is important as fans and participants of this spectacular event that we communicate, ask questions, and work together in order to make it safe and fun for everyone. One of our goals is to give administrators and schools the confidence that vaulters are learning and training in a safe, exciting environment. The pole vault has a rich and colorful history. Through our camps and others like it, we look for it to have an exciting future.

Kiss the Sky,

Greg Hull
